Tilghman Point

Located on the eastern end of Little River Neck, Tilghman Point is the location of several historical points of interest: the Allston Plantation, the Randall Plantation, Fort Randall and the Tilghman Houses. Horace Tilghman, Sr. purchased this property in the 1920s from Lillian Bessent Randall, widow of Louis H. Randall. To this property tracts were added that eventually amounted to 3,854 acres in Little River Neck, including 232 acres across the river in Colkin's Neck. After Tilghman's purchase, the area known as the Battery, in the vicinity of Fort Randall, became to be called Tilghman Point.
